"His last SONA"

Dr Patrick Herminie, the President of the United Seychelles Party, responded to Wavel Ramkalawan's State of the Nation Address (SONA) presented in the National Assembly on Thursday. Dr Herminie, who will win the polls on September 27, described Ramkalawan's speech as divisive and riddled with hatred. He highlighted the President's failure to take responsibility for his government's shortcomings, instead blaming the civil service.

We present the main points of Dr Herminie's response to Ramkalawan's SONA.

"Ramkalawan's SONA is the most deplorable speech our country has ever heard. He utilised this platform for political rhetoric, attacking his opponents and blaming his government's shortcomings on civil servants. It was a speech from a fearful man who feels like he is 'drowning' and is grasping for excuses to shift the blame away from himself. His conduct lacks the decorum expected of a president. He resorted to personal attacks against his opponents over issues such as the "kitenge" (a fabric United Seychelles activists dressed in at political events) and the sale of land legally acquired by the Party.

Members of United Seychelles walked out in protest; they were repulsed by his insults when he should have been addressing critical issues facing our country, such as the rising cost of living and the lack of decent housing. He has offered no solutions or hope to the

Is this indicative of a diplomatic war brewing?

In his State of the Nation Address, Ramka insisted he would amend the Constitution to block any possibility of a military base on Assumption Island. However, he authorised the construction of a hotel there despite local and international calls to halt the project to protect the pristine ecosystem of the UNESCO-listed Aldabra Atoll.

During his address, Ramka announced his intention to leverage his two-thirds majority in the National Assembly to amend the Constitution prohibiting a military base on

This is a reality we must not forget

We are bombarded with lies and false promises, and it's evident that those in power are ignoring our struggles. As we enter the fifth year, the only change is the scale of politicians' deceit. They seem more concerned about the lack of accountability they will face when leaving their positions and the privileges they will miss.

While we fought to provide our children with even three decent meals a day, these politicians indulged in caviar, champagne, and extravagant meals at five-star hotels—not senior citizens waiting for their R10,000 in social security. He did not mention how he plans to provide for these individuals. This SONA has been profoundly disappointing and deserves a place in the history dustbin.

The President cannot foster unity in our country; instead, he contributes to division. He stated that Florry Larue and Naddy Zialor, two LDS members who were replaced in the National Assembly, would receive government jobs. However, what about Mrs. Rachel Spiro, who departed from our ranks?

WEAPONISING THE PAST

Ramkalawan politicises every situation and creates division. For our nation to achieve unity, he must exit the political arena entirely. In his desperation, he inaccurately twists my speech nuances to claim that the United Seychelles is the sole viable option for Seychelles, attempting to portray us as a violent party, among other falsehoods. Let me clarify that none of the current leaders in our Party has ties to the violations of the one-party state. As a doctor, I pledged to save lives and not otherwise. We will confront him at the polls. He is aware of this, but a desperate man will say anything in a futile attempt to gain an advantage. He hopes to exploit the TRNUC to his benefit, as he did in October 2020, while using hatred to divide us. The Seychellois people understand that many individuals listed as perpetrators are still part of his government. United Seychelles was never summoned before the TRNUC as a perpetrator. Since July, he has mentioned forming a successor committee for the TRNUC. He is currently claiming he is still negotiating their salaries.

When United Seychelles returns to power, we will establish a committee to negotiate compensation for the victims and those seeking the return of their lands. We recognise that some land cannot be returned because the acquisition programme was intended to build homes for ordinary Seychellois families in need. Some landowners have already received compensation for their properties. We will engage in discussions and negotiations to resolve these matters, fostering reconciliation and unity among our people.

Ramkalawan talks about numerous issues but neglects to mention the CCCL explosion that devastated businesses and homes in December 2023. What has happened to the police report? We will investigate this incident and provide the public with the truth.

Regarding the alleged sabotage within the government and the threats made to workers, we have a president who either forgets or chooses not to acknowledge his actions, subsequently placing the blame on others. He claims to speak out against victimisation; however, we possess a list of United Seychelles activists dismissed from their jobs, including CEOs, State House staff, and District

Administrators. He resembles a labourer who blames his tools. Yet we all know he micromanages every government ministry, makes impulsive decisions, and interferes without fully understanding how the civil service operates. Ultimately, he is accountable, and the responsibility lies with him.

We have visited Praslin and La Digue and are aware of the problems the inhabitants face. We also know that he recently went there in desperation, only to be told to his face that he had failed and would not receive their votes.

HIS HALF-TRUTHS ON DRUGS

On the issue of drugs, I can confidently say the President is a hypocrite. How many traffickers were released when he took office? Who went to Corgat Estate, promising the youth they could continue taking drugs when they came to power? All his propaganda regarding drugs has failed; today, illegal drugs like heroin, crystal meth, and cocaine are epidemic.

Where are the seven tons of heroin seized at sea? Who is selling drugs in the ghettos?

Regarding human trafficking—why prevent the public from hearing these cases in court? Let them understand what is happening; that would help them grasp this process. Ramkalawan should not delude himself; the people are aware of which Party has benefited from drug money, with Seychellois suffering in Afghanistan and Iran as drug guarantors. With the upcoming elections, he is using drugs as a political weapon. What happened to his promise to eliminate drugs within 100 days of office? How about his plans after one year? Where are his successes? There is a clear pattern with the arrests; some are protected while others are severely punished. Is developing a cartel the aim of this administration? He is merely manipulating the minds of parents whose children are struggling with addiction, claiming he is fighting against it. He is fooling no one. What about the documentation and photos of the drugs he claims were destroyed at sea? Who are the witnesses? What boats were used to transport the drugs for destruction?

He speaks about freedom yet conveniently forgets the individuals who were arrested and spent nights in jail for expressing themselves on social media. Ralph Volcere (Editor of the Independent newspaper and now an independent presidential candidate) was arrested and is facing a court case for taking some pictures.

I hold nothing personal against this man, but he is unsuitable for Seychelles. Is he aware that many people in this country live in fear? They are afraid to make phone calls and opt for WhatsApp or Telegram because they fear the government monitors their conversations. One person commented on Assumption Isto take loans from the IMF to bolster our reserves, yet the President claims these reserves are better than ever. He has used loans to inflate the reserves. Where is the economic growth? Have the people's lives improved over the past four and a half years? More than three-quarters of the population would say no—except for the President's close friends.

Tourism is in dire straits; we rank last in the Indian Ocean with a meagre 0.5% increase in arrivals for 2024. He blames guesthouses, not the taxes that render our destination uncompetitive, including the excessive charges (Travisory) tourists complain about.

He ridicules our proposal to relaunch our national airline with long-haul flights in the European markets. We must overcome our fears and take action. European tourists consistently express frustration about the lengthy travel times to reach Seychelles. We are not utilising the full capacity of our planes. Lest he land, and shortly after, a team of masked men came to his house under the pretext of a drug search.

MISLEADING STATEMENTS

He boasts that Seychelles took first place in the MO Ibrahim Index, giving the impression that this achievement occurred under his mandate. This is misleading—the MO Ibrahim Index is measured over ten years, from 2013 to 2023. This means the achievements of the United Seychelles Government contributed to Seychelles' top ranking. If anything, since 2020, Seychelles has scored lower in some sectors according to the MO Ibrahim Index. We were previously ranked first for purchasing power parity but no longer among the top ten countries. Our people face poverty because the LDS has failed miserably.

We are the first government in the world

forget, Air Seychelles was once prosperous for many years before facing difficulties.

What about the business community? He has not addressed this sector or outlined how his government intends to resolve its issues and help it thrive again. He speaks about the Agency for Social Protection (ASP). He pretends it is beneficial, but what about the bureaucratic hurdles people face filling out form after form? The President only laments and fails to take meaningful action to rectify the situation in this country; he cannot do it. He is attempting to curry favour with the professionals in the military by complimenting them. Still, our Party has trained many members of the force overseas. Whatever his intentions are, he will not succeed."

Qatari investors—favoured partner for Ramka's government the island. This decision followed suggestions from opponents that a small security facility managed by the Seychelles Defence Force (SDF) could be a more beneficial alternative to a potentially environmentally damaging hotel. Such a facility could aid in combating poaching, drug trafficking, and other illicit activities within Seychelles' extensive 1.3 million square kilometres of maritime territory, including crucial trade routes in that part of the Indian Ocean.

Due to its strategic location, Seychelles is a key maritime hub for goods travelling between East Africa, the Middle East and Asia.

Ramkalawan confirmed the commencement of hotel construction on Assumption under the supervision of the Seychelles Island Foundation (SIF) and the Island Development Company (IDC). There are allegations that Ramkalawan travelled to Qatar to discuss the construction of the hotel project with developers while attending a government summit in the UAE, opting to let them do the construction instead of allowing it to proceed through GICC. While he did not address these claims in his speech, they have circulated on social media.

This raises questions about his stance: while blocking the possibility of a small military facility (not a military base), which might have even received support from India, he has rolled out the red carpet for the Qatari (investors), granting them a 99-year lease for the hotel project on a significant portion of the island. Moreover, in his sweeping criticisms of various sectors in the country, he singled out shopkeepers of Seychellois Indian origin for dishonesty and overcharging customers. This raises eyebrows, particularly given that he has previously solicited votes from this community. Perhaps he no longer feels he needs their support as elections approach, showcasing an arrogance that seems to know no bounds. Or is he playing the ethnic card ahead of the polls? As the public observes, the situation remains complex. We can only conclude that Ramkalawan has his eyes on the petrodollars of the Middle East.

Jeanne & Marcel

Dear Jeanne,

2025 will be the shortest year because too many of us are praying for September so that elections are held and we can get our country back. It feels like our nation is under arrest with inept politicians who have done nothing to move us forward, and the majority of our people are living in poverty. Many are counting down the days with United Seychelles, pushing past challenges to reach 27 September; that's how desperate we are for a change in leadership.

Just imagine the day after the elections—a fresh start, a new dawn, and a wave of new leaders ushering in a revitalised Seychelles with United Seychelles 2.0. The anticipation is palpable, and I can't wait to see the positive changes ahead!

If you're in Praslin, you've probably heard one person was reprimanded for neglecting his duties, especially towards the district. There was an intense moment after that where that individual, clearly frustrated, expressed his disappointment, saying, "I did not do my job? I've been busy defending your crappy decisions."

That's the kind of poor leadership we're witnessing—when the leader shifts blame onto others instead of owning up to their responsibilities. The LDS mandate has been lacklustre, and blaming each other will not change that reality.

Instead of recognising their failings, silly rumours are spreading to distract from the issues. People are struggling and looking for financial relief. It's no surprise they might turn to politicians during election season—especially that one politician who wants dirt on his opponent because he's slowly losing ground under his rich feet.

He must recognise that his opponents are entitled to their lives and choices. Dr Herminie has every right to live as a private citizen until the elections—he seems to be gaining traction with the public, and people are eager to vote.

Some may find my words unsettling, but the truth is undeniable: the people are leaning towards change and demanding accountability for the past four years of disappointments. Can you believe the 35 years of division and political games that have brought us to this point? It's for unity in the face of leadership failures.

A disappointing administration may promise the world, but let's remember that actions have consequences that impact us all. We've lived the implications of our vote for the past four years, so we should know better. We should seek leaders who prioritise the common good and uphold values that nurture our society. United Seychelles is dedicated to providing a viable alternative and working to restore Seychelles to being the best destination, friendliest nation in the region and top in its economic and social sectors. It has solutions to address the high cost of living, raise everyone's standard of living, and offer equal opportunities.

To the individual preaching about a party with a troubled past in mass, remember that the same party helped lift your family from destitution many years ago, providing a decent home and improving living standards. They acted in good faith, upholding principles after independence. Instead of revisiting old wounds, let us move on to healing and unity.

How come he forgot the more recent tragic event at Montagne Posee Prison under Ramkalawan's administration, where lives were lost in utterly avoidable circumstances. Are the politicians responsible for the tragedy that took place criminals? We must think before speaking and join together to pursue prosperity and happiness. The division and false positivity must end.

Stay engaged, my friend.

Ramkalawan's hypocritical show with alleged drug dealers

for political mileage*

We learned that the President will make a multi-country trip in the Arabian Peninsula, including Iran, Egypt, and into the 'Greater Middle East', to go to Afghanistan to negotiate the release of over 30 Seychellois who were allegedly trapped due to drug trafficking or were sent as guarantors for drug trafficking.

A few questions arise: if the President knew he could release these men, why is he doing it now, just seven months ahead of the election, and not earlier? Is he trying to pre-empt a change of administration that may uncover connections or affiliations linking individuals, whether drug dealers or victims, to those close to the President? His lack of transparency only fuels the public's distrust.

Mr. President, the Seychellois public has been connecting the dots for a long time and concluded that there is one reason why the drug influx has increased—people with influence have taken over the trade. Could it be, Mr President, that individuals within your government are responsible for the drug trade not only persisting but intensifying, affecting our youth and corrupting the system? If so, doesn't it make you look desperate, staging a performance for political advantage ahead of the upcoming election?

We are not condoning the trafficking and abuse of illicit drugs, but you cling to straws despite the public's loss of faith in your leadership. Even your inauguration of projects, visits to the populace, and solicitations for donations for healthcare supplies are seen as desperate attempts to regain political advantage. Over the past four years, your incompetence, lies, and failures have diminished the living standards of many, making it increasingly difficult for them to afford necessities. The public is eager to vote you out of office, and your disregard for their opinion only fuels their indignation.

Putting an end to dictatorship in Seychelles

Let's continue to unite to end our country's arrogant, incompetent, greedy, and corrupt leadership. From 2020 until now, we have experienced dictatorship, and this will end on 27 September when we vote the politicians out of office. Every vote counts, and it's our (collective) responsibility to bring about this change. We have seen an arrogant president exhibit his superiority and dismiss the concerns and needs of the Seychellois. We remember well how he publicly insulted the victims of the CCCL explosion simply because these individuals sought justice and compensation. He has travelled excessively, often without accountability to those who put him in power. His constant travels have created a disconnect from the Seychellois. Over the past four years, he has misled the people with out-of-touch speeches and interviews, failing to address pressing issues, such as the high cost of living. His arrogance has tried to stifle his opponents and discouraged open dialogue or freedom of expression. He has attempted to silence critical voices by amending criminal laws and arresting those who express concerns on social media platforms. The public has witnessed the detrimental effects of his lack of governing skills and knowledge, contributing to inefficient administration and policy failures. We have observed economic mismanagement, an inadequate health-care system, and failing educational institutions. His inefficiency has hindered national development and exacerbated existing problems. Prime examples are the drug problem, now an epidemic with new lethal drugs. He has himself said that people are fabricating drugs. The Truth Commission has addressed the alleged violations from the one-party state era, 1977 to 1993, and the government is procrastinating on compensating the suspected victims. Now, on the eve of an election, he wants to erect a monument for the victims — a stark contrast to his behaviour when he needed their support to win the 2020 election. The impact of his actions is clear, and it's time for us to make a change.

Leadership driven by greed prioritises personal gain over national welfare, and we have seen this throughout his mandate.

Seychellois know that greedy politicians engage in corrupt practices, embezzling public funds and exploiting national resources for personal enrichment. There is a general mistrust of politicians in our government. In contrast, some may be more untrustworthy than others. Most fall into the same category of ineffective leaders who have contributed to rising poverty and increasing inequality, widening the gap between the elite, including politicians and ordinary citizens.

Corruption is a pervasive issue today. It undermines the efficiency of our security forces, particularly the police, which is run by the State House, sidestepping the proper structural protocols.

Suppose our president is unaware or unwilling to acknowledge it. In that case, nepotism (power of influence favouring relatives and associates), cronyism (appointing relatives and friends to power without proper regard to their qualifications), and bribery are precise forms of corruption. They also undermine the rule of law and foster a culture of impunity.

The combined effects of arrogance, incompetence, greed, and corruption—four principles that define the current government—have had devastating economic and social consequences for our nation and its people. If we allow these politicians to remain in power, the situation in five years will be even worse than it is now.

We have no choice but to vote for responsible and ethical leadership. As a nation, we must remain vigilant as we approach the September change and ensure we build a brighter future together. This accountable leadership is imperative for Seychelles.

We still struggle to put food on the table

just here but also in the Gulf. Their trips across the globe, funded by our hard-earned taxpayer money, are not just a matter of concern but a cause for outrage. When they claim their expenses are covered, it's naive to believe they aren't also pocketing our tax dollars through hefty per diems and other benefits. Given their track record of dishonesty, can we even trust that their trips are genuinely funded?

Remember the COVID-19 pandemic when they hosted lavish cocktails at State House? They squandered SR3 million during that time on a single trip to the outer islands, travelled abroad, and granted themselves substantial allowances while purchasing new vehicles that cost millions. Yet, they claimed they couldn't enact national projects or lower the cost of living, blaming global conflicts for their failures. The turmoil in the Middle East and Eastern Europe, particularly between Russia and Ukraine, did not impede the promises made by Ramkalawan and the LDS. Their incompetence and self-serving interests overshadowed their commitment to our needs, and it's time we call out their blatant disregard for our struggles and their failure to fulfil their duties.

Ramkalawan, bolstered by his allies in the cabinet and National Assembly, has shown a blatant lack of interest. Now, as he canvasses for votes door-to-door, he does so without dignity, humility, or any qualities one would expect from a true leader. Astonishingly, he believes he's performing well. Someone needs to step up and inform him that he squandered a significant opportunity to prove himself better than his predecessors. Instead, he has only shown us that he is the worst, a master manipulator intent on clinging to power for another five years.

People are ready for change

Wavel Ramkalawan's State of the Nation Address (SONA) has been disingenuous to our country's citizens. Despite his claims of progress and engagement, he seems to disregard the voices of the majority united against his administration, who increasingly call for a shift in leadership. As President, Ramkalawan has consistently prioritised his interests and those of his inner circle over the people's needs, resulting in widespread discontent. This has fueled a strong, collective desire for new leadership to take the helm.

The prevailing sentiment among the populace is overwhelmingly negative towards his leadership. Disillusioned by his administration's failures, many citizens do not want to hear him speak. While he may view this moment as an opportunity for reflection and to grasp the reasons behind the dissatisfaction, it has already become evident that such introspection is too late to repair the damage done. Although he may claim to listen to citizens' voices as he approaches them for their support ahead of the upcoming elections, it is clear that he has not made the necessary time to engage with their concerns meaningfully during his time in office. This disconnect has become painfully apparent in recent interactions in door-to-door visits, where his efforts to reconnect with the electorate have been perceived as insincere and superficial.

People are cursing and burning his political flyers. He had four years to build relationships with the public and honour his commitments. Yet, he chose instead to prioritise personal gain and the interests of a select few. His administration has consistently failed to deliver decisions and policies that benefit the nation. Consequently, voters are determined to make informed choices at the ballot box in September. Moreover, Ramkalawan and his allies must agree that a healthy democracy thrives when people's will is respected, and leaders are held accountable for their actions. Seven months before the elections, the electorate—particularly those who placed their faith in him during the 2020 election—is looking beyond his rhetoric and seeing the stark reality of their circumstances. His empty promises and desperate attempts to maintain his grip on power are unlikely to persuade those who have recognised the detrimental effects of his leadership on their lives. His continued prioritisation of personal and elite interests has led to a notable decline in the overall quality of life for countless citizens.

As a result, voters are prepared to select a leader who truly represents their interests and is committed to working for the welfare of the people. That leader is Dr. Patrick Herminie, the candidate representing United Seychelles. With a proven track record of success and extensive experience in governance, he is the one to restore what the country and people have lost and hope for a brighter future. Dr. Herminie embodies a vision for Seychelles that contrasts sharply with the disappointing tenure of a self-serving and ineffective Ramkalawan. The latter's agenda in power has been markedly different from his promises to secure his position, and empty assurances, deceit, and manipulation have marred his rise to the highest office.

In these critical times, the electorate is not just ready but eager for a leader who prioritises their needs, fosters transparency, and actively works to restore trust in the government. Dr. Herminie offers the leadership to bring about the necessary change Seychelles needs to thrive.

He's lost grip

People are laughing at the pathetic president who is only now realising he will not win the upcoming polls in September. He is scrambling to lay the foundation for projects he knows will never come to fruition under his administration. His frustration is evident as he lashes out at his MNAs, who have similarly ignored the people's needs while pursuing their interests and newfound wealth over the past four years. He is making last-minute visits and convening meetings, trying desperately to convince citizens increasingly disillusioned by his empty promises and antics.

Has Ramkalawan taken the time to recognise the devastation caused during his time in office? Does he truly understand the ramifications of his failed leadership on the people? It seems he is aware but prefers to ignore reality. He believes that after manipulating voters' perceptions for over 35 years, he can pull off the same trick once more to cling to power. This only fuels the voters' anger, making them more determined to unseat him and hold him accountable for his government's poor decisions and corruption.

When political leadership fails to prioritise the people's needs, the consequences can be dire. Ramkalawan's mismanagement of the economy has led to soaring unemployment, rampant inflation, increased cost of living, and stagnant economic growth. This is the stark reality, far removed from the false narratives they peddle. As a result, poverty and inequality have risen, and the business landscape has diminished, obstructing personal and national development. Our institutions have weakened, creating a cycle of poverty that can only be broken when a capable and experienced leader takes over after his departure in September.

Socially, the effects of this poor leadership are deeply felt, especially in health and education. The decline of our once-successful health system under Ramkalawan is shocking. Despite the highest budget allocation for health care, the people are met with inadequate services. Either there was a lie about the budget figures, or the mismanagement lies with politicians who micromanage the sector. Education faces a similar fate; a large budget does not equate to effective management or quality education. The deterioration of educational standards under this administration has hampered the leaders' ability to implement productive decisions and improve programmes that once proved successful.

This decline spans all sectors and results from incompetent and reckless leadership. Ramkalawan prioritised his interests over those of the populace and eroded transparency, accountability, and the rule of law. By undermining these democratic values, he paved the way for corruption and abuse of power. Currently, a power vacuum exists in Seychelles. Fortunately, this situation has not led to political instability—at least not yet. The Seychellois cherish their country and wish for change to unfold through the appropriate channels. In other nations, authoritarian regimes such as the LDS face relentless protests until they either change their ways or are ousted from power.

Instead of running around like a headless chicken, it's time to prepare to get out

Pour 43 an Sesel, gran mazorite fanmiy Seselwa ti mwayen klas. Save-dir nou ti dan milye ant laklas travayer ek klas pli o- karakterize par nou reveni, ledikasyon e stati sosyal. Dan mwayen klas en travayer i dan en lanplwa ki stab, sa i enkli bann profesyonnel, e dimoun ki propriyeter en biznes. Nou fanmiy Seselwa ti kapab zouir en bon nivo lavi e menm aford en vakans.

The Syndicate's latest video has undoubtedly stirred the pot

The latest video from the Syndicate contained a bombshell revelation that caught everyone's attention. Though we always said the former opposition knew who were behind the Syndicate, listening to the speaker allegedly claim with confidence that the Syndicate was formed by the former opposition to undermine the previous government is something else altogether. This unexpected twist forces us to reconsider everything the Syndicate has done during their predecessor's mandate, and it's chilling to think how desperate some politicians were for power. That reminds us of the statement made by Ramkalawan at the funeral of his former driver, which quite frankly was uncalled for because it damaged the reputation of the man who was loyal to him. We also remember him publicly saying that his party, the former SNP, started underground and became Parti Seselwa. Have these mischiefs been going on for that long? At what point did it become the Syndicate? The Syndicate alleged that they would now be their creation turned against them. How about that? We cannot condone the Syndicate's activities, but the last video was eye-opening.

The curse continues

After leaving the UAE, the boat carrying the equipment to erect the stadium for the beach soccer tournament encountered problems and had to stop in Oman for repairs. The captain must know that this has little to do with his boat and more with the curse of the political administration in power in Seychelles. Everything they touch or attempt to do faces problems. However, for the love of those who enjoy this sport, the stadium will arrive on time and can be set up for the tournament. This situation brings to mind the riot vehicle they planned to purchase from Kenya, which turned out to be an old, rusted piece of junk that spent months at the port in Kenya. They had to notify the authorities here to retrieve it before it completely deteriorated. We received countless excuses for the vehicle's age and rusted condition, with politicians blaming everyone but themselves. Let's hope Seychelles gets a quality stadium to welcome FIFA and other contestants for the tournament and does not later discover it was a second-hand purchase that allowed someone to pocket '10%' of the deal. We hear this is how some of them do it—they take a 10% cut on every government project. With sponsors, FIFA, and others likely pouring money into this project, we can only imagine how their eyes light up with opportunity. The public remains vigilant, ready to see if politicians try to get their hands into this cookie jar.

They are extracting sand from one outer island. Guess which one?

Lafreyer ek divizyon, 2 zouti arkaik

Letan nou apros pli pros avek eleksyon, i annan 2 zouti ki LDS pe esey servi. Sa i Lafreyer ek Divizyon. Avek ki bi? Sa se pour fer voter konfize e per pour vot kont zot. Me toulede sa zouti, zot letan in ekspire. Okontrè plis ki zot servi, i bles zotmenm. Seselwza i ganny en konpran ki kalite gouvènmàn las ki nou annan dan sa pei. Annou pran sa zafer bis nwanr ki swadizan pe pase e anmas dimoun. Preski tou Seselwa i annan en lopinyon kler lo la. Sa bann dimoun i bezwen konnekte avek sistenm. Lotorite i konnen lekel zot. Me vi ki zot pe fer en travay pour sa menm sistenm, alor zanmen zot ganny ratrape. Personn pa zanmen konn zot idantite. Dan en pti pei parey Sese, sa pa posib. Menm zafer avek loder gas lannen pase.

Sa zistwar in persiste pour plis ki 1 mwan. Zanmen personn in konnen lekel ki responsab. Plis ankor, kwa ki zot ti pe servi pour fer sa loder. Ziska ozordi.

La aprezan zot oule senm divizyon parmi nou popilasyon, san realize ki Seselwa pli malen ki zot, me zot pe les sa ki krwar i malen, pas pour pli malen. Kwa ki enportan? Sa ki enportan pour sa pep se ki nou tir Wavel Ramkalawan opouvwar. I en move Prezidan e sa tou dimoun in konnen. Nou pa kapab kit li ankor 5 an opouvwar. Seselwa pa pou les zot ganny divize lo sa pwen. Se en lot parti politik ki bezwen tras en nouvo larout pour Sesel. LDS son politik bate latet son letan in fini. Zot Prezidan Wavel Ramkalawan son letan anbet Seselwa in fini.

Se sa kalite solidarite ki Seselwa i annan pour sa eleksyon. Wavel DEOR!

Tripartite remains a key challenge since Union's creation

The seminar on industrial relations, organised and hosted by the United Workers Union (UWS) at their headquarters at Maison du Peuple, with the participation of the Employment and Employers' Association, was a step for-solutions for workers with grievances, reassuring them of the Union's commitment to their cause.

"We are not a union that always seeks to be in dispute with employers; we prefer negotiation that brings about a faster solution. It is for the benefit of the workers. We have decided that the workshop is the beginning of more promotions of industrial relations that can benefit not only the worker but the organisation and the country. When there are fewer problems to solve, productivity increases." This unique approach of the UWS, focusing on negotiation and faster solutions, sets it apart in the industrial relations landscape.

He explained that employers do not engage in a tripartite negotiation because they do not recognise workers' rights enshrined in the Constitution, Article 23. It states that a worker ward in promoting tripartite relations to resolve workplace disputes. It kicked off the working year for UWS, the youngest Union launched on 15 July 2021.

According to the Union's President, Mr Jerry Sopha, the Union has proactively identified that many mediation cases brought to them could have been resolved at the workplace if employers had known about the importance of the tripartite relation. This proactive approach saves the employer time and resources and, most importantly, provides faster has a right to belong to a Union.

The Union's executive committee has already decided that more exercises on industrial relations will be conducted. Both the Employment and Employers' Association have agreed to support the endeavours of the UWS so that together they can educate the employers and workers about their rights and responsibilities, and seek always to find a peaceful solution to workplace grievances.

Since its inception, the Union has been busy recruiting and mediating. Many cases have been resolved with the Employment Tribunal, a testament to the Union's commitment to resolving disputes. However, other cases are pending due to understaffing, highlighting the Tribunal's challenges.
